Mcllwaine managed to win only a single hole, the 45-yard sixth, where Carter trapped a massle shot and took a six. This was one of the few mistaken the defending title-holder made in the entire match. Carter, starting with a rush, captured the first and third holes before his opponent really knew what had happened. At the 490-yard fourth Carter, after great drive, put a tremendous brassey shot on the green and was home in four, a stroke better than par. He won the next with good putting, and at this point he was four holes in the lead.

Mellwaine braced for a few minutes, long enough to win the sixth and haive the seventh, but Carter soon caught his strate and ran down a 20-foot putt on the eighth for the test was a true exhibition of suhole.
The ninth was squared turning for home. Carter captured the eleventh and thirteenth, which gave him

New York, the big liquin threat-the chops for trying to can him and McGraw, to get under cover, says I'm a liar. Well, there are times when the man who goes back on his own offer and tries to villify the other fellow is both a liar and crasy.

"I repeat that McGraw made the offer, and I also repeat that somebody at a distance approximately 850 miles from Cincinnati is either insane or a liar, or both."
